Write a MATLAB script M-file named `WaterReport.m` that uses the water usage data from `WaterUsage.xlsx` and prints the following information to the screen

- Table of kgal usage and charge for each season
- Average kgal usage & charge for each season

Also produce a bar graph for the water consumption with respect to the months (Mar2015-Feb2016).

To calculate the charge for a month you need to know the average winter consumption (AWC) of customer 3. This will be done by calling the function `AWC` with the data for cycle 2014-2015 as input, from script file `WaterReport`. Using this AWC value, the charges for Mar2015-Feb2016 will be calculated by calling function `WaterCharge` using data for 2015-2016 cycle as input.

The output to the screen should exactly look like:

```
Summer billing:
Month Usage Bill
=====
March 26.00 $174.16
April 57.00 $396.94
May 85.00 $593.64
June 71.00 $496.48
July 69.00 $482.60
August 55.00 $382.53
```

```
Average summer bill = $421.06
Average summer consumption = 60.50 kgal
```

```
Winter billing:
Month Usage Bill
=====
September 48.00 $315.76
October 35.00 $231.91
November 22.00 $155.56
December 25.00 $169.51
January 17.00 $132.31
February 21.00 $150.91
```

```
Average winter bill = $192.66
Average winter consumption = 28.00 kgal
```

Learn how to install Sensus WP-Dynamic water meter with our guide to measure terminology and best practice set up. The Sensus WP-Dynamic water meter is approved NMI standard in Australia for inclusion in non-urban water facilities. The high-quality turbine meter is essential within these projects, and needs to be installed according to government requirements, relevant standards, certifications and approvals, in addition to the manufacturer's recommendations and design requirements. Meter Terminology When looking at the product data sheet, it is important to understand the relevant measurement terminology: Q1 : This is the minimum flow rate suggested for the meter to operate within the ideal precision range. Q3 : This is the maximum continuous flow rate suggested for the meter to operate within the ideal precision range. Q4 : This is the maximum short flow rate suggested for the meter to operate within the ideal precision range. Maximum ranges should be avoided where practical, as high flow operation can cause excessive wear on the meter over long periods. Wear also depends on the quality of the water passing by the meter. The Sensus WP-Dynamic water meter installed as part of a water work pipeline. Installation When designing the installation pipe, we recommend considering the following points: The meter should be scaled to ensure that the selected diameter (DN) works correctly within the meter manufacturer's recommendations. It is also essential that you consider any recommendations provided by the Australian government, which may have different flow requirements for the manufacturer. The upstream and downstream mating pipe should be as close as practical for the internal diameter of the meter. The joint used between the meter and the mating flange should be correctly sized. The joints used with an ID smaller than the meter will cause problems. O-ring should be designed so that the meter is always full of water. Entrapped air can cause issues with meter accuracy. If in doubt, ensure you install combination air valves close to the meter to avoid entrapped air. If the meter is dry during stationary conditions, large volumes of air passing through the meter on pump start can cause excessive wear on the meter and inaccuracy in the totaliser. We suggest you contact our team to select a correct air release valve to ensure air is released prior to the meter to avoid excessive wear becoming an issue. Ensure all mating pipework has been flushed of dirt and debris prior to bringing the meter on line. If there is potential contamination in the water flow, you should install the Sensus WP-F dirt box strainer to help protect the meter. We're here to help! If you'd like to learn more about our WP-Dynamic water meter, visit our online product page, or get in touch with your local sales office for support. Make enquiry If we estimate your bill, it can sometimes be higher or lower than your actual water usage, particularly if you've recently had a meter fitted and there's no reading history to guide us. If you receive an estimated bill but would like, a bill based on a meter reading, simply send us a meter reading and we'll re-calculate your bill. A bill.
